

San Diego Flood Response Fund

Impact Report

The Power of Coming Together.

Monday, January 22, 2024, is a day that will live long in the memories of thousands of San Diego residents, especially those in southeastern San Diego, south San Diego, National City and Spring Valley.

That day, heavy rains flooded several communities throughout San Diego County, with water levels rising as high as six feet in some homes. To date, the Federal Emergency Management Agency has approved $22 million in aid related to flooding in San Diego County alone. Months later, residents are still feeling the impacts of that day and may be for many months, if not years, to come.

This severe weather, dubbed “a 1,000-year storm” as there was 1 in 1,000 chance of it happening during any given year, devastated families and destroyed countless homes in a matter of hours. Cars were swept from roads, while buildings and infrastructure were damaged throughout the county.

In the days that followed, local cities, the County of San Diego and the state of California declared a state of emergency. It also became clear to nonprofit and government partners that swift assistance was needed for flood survivors. By Thursday, January 25, San Diego Foundation (SDF) launched the San Diego Flood Response Fund, a philanthropic effort to raise and deploy funds to the nonprofits serving the communities that needed assistance the most. Within the first 48 hours, hundreds of donors, including SDF fundholders, heeded the call for assistance and gave $82,000 to the fund.

Helping the Community.

SBCS and YMCA of San Diego County

When flooding struck neighborhoods and communities throughout the region, thousands of San Diegans were displaced and left homeless. Thanks to the efforts of SBCS and YMCA of San Diego County, more than 1,500 families were temporarily housed in local hotels until they were transitioned into a County of San Diego temporary housing program.

Harvey Family Foundation

When floodwaters began to rise in southeastern San Diego, Armon Harvey, President and CEO of the Harvey Family Foundation, immediately stepped up to serve the community, connecting with other nonprofits to provide much-needed services to those in need. Throughout the recovery process, the Harvey Family Foundation has provided leadership, hot meals, and home remediation and repair work coordination for southeastern San Diego residents.

County of San Diego Black Chamber of Commerce, Jacobs & Cushman San Diego Food Bank and Feeding San Diego

Floodwaters entered many residents' homes, causing many to lose access to their kitchens and destroying cooking appliances and stored food. Thankfully, through the County of San Diego Black Chamber of Commerce, many family-owned restaurants, along with the Jacobs & Cushman San Diego Food Bank and Feeding San Diego, stepped up to provide more than 4,500 flood survivors with food and meals.

Joint Initiatives for Racial Equity in Health

Immediately following the flooding, Joint Initiatives for Racial Equity in Health, also known as JIREH Providers, went out into neighborhoods with its mobile clinic to provide preventative health services, such as blood pressure screenings, and to help residents replace lost medical devices and destroyed medications. Thanks to their efforts, flood survivors addressed their physical health needs.

“It’s important that all of us gather and support our communities as one. People need our help right now. SDF is here to help facilitate from a fundraising standpoint and depends on the nonprofit partners that are on the ground gaining the trust and supporting the community when they need it most.”
